of excraciating pain in the kead, back, and limbs, attended with nauses and vomiting. Her kidneys were torpid, and the urine—which had to be drawn by means of the eathert—scanty and charged with blood. She had passed Eight MoNTHS WITH-OUT EXPERIENCING THE MENSTRUAL FLOW. She informed me that several times in a period of ten years the failure of the monthly function for several consecutive months had been followed by a like train of symptoms and that upon those occasions she was relieved by HEMOR-RHAGES from the lungs or stomach. From the symptoms and history of the case it was evident that the kidneys had attempted to relieve the plethora incident to her condition, and that in the attempt they had seriously disturbed their own peculiar function. During an extreme tilness of many weeks, every remedy that seemed at all indicated in the case was faithfully tested, but without result, save an occasional slight alleviation of the distressing symptoms already described. The kidneys remained inactive; the average distance in of fined drawn from the bladder did not exceed two ounces, and more than half that quantity was blood. On one occasion four days passed with-out any secretion at all from the kidneys. It became evident that the patient must die unless some remedy could be found of much greater efficacy than any that had been tried. In this extremity it was determined to make an experiment in the case with BUFFALO. LITHLA WATER, a case of which was ordered with but a faint hope of keeping ber alive until its arrival by making the skin and howels perform the eliminating functions of the kilneys. So soon as the water was received the patient was put upon it, to the exclusion of all other ireatment. The result was most astonishing. The first day's use of the water showed marked improvement in the action of the kilneys. So soon as the water was received the patient was put upon it, to the exclusion of all other ireatment. The result was most astonishing. The reatment was of the without and pain in the head and limbs, w formed them of every step he has taken.

KILLED HIS WIFE.

Terrible Tragedy in Charles City-A Jenlons Husband Ends His Wife's Life with a Double-Barrelled Shot-Gun.

It has been a long time since the quiet neighborhood in the vicinity of Charles City Courthouse has been called upon to notice a more terrible tragedy, and one bet-ter calculated to create feelings of excitement, than the killing of Mrs. Eliza Orange by her husband, James Orange, Monday afternoon.

James Orange, the author of the deed, is a man in the prime of life. He owns a small plantation about eight miles from the small plantation about eight miles from the county-seat of Charles City county, and has been able by means of hard work to keep free from debt and to take care of a wife and two children. About four years ago he married Eliza Woodcock, and since their marriage the two have lived upon the little farm, testing the struggles of life.

James Orange was a man, it is said, of James Orange was a man, it is said, of lymphatic temperament, and, unfortunately, frequent family jars occurred. His jealous mind saw many things in his wife's conduct that he condemned, and, whether with or without ground, these matters gave Orange great concern. He brooded over them, and at last his morbid condition of mind caused him to stain his hands with the blood of the woman whom he had the blood of the woman whom he had sworn to be true to through life.

sworn to be true to through life.

It is the first time that a deed of this sort has shocked the good people of Charles City county within the recollection of the oldest resident. The community in which the tragedy occurred has always been noted for its quiet and peaceable character, and violations of law or outrages against the peace of the Commonwealth are rarely heard of. The news of Mrs. Orange death, and the manner thereof, therefore, fell with startling effect upon the people. and it was hard at first to give it credence.

The facts in the case as nearly as they can be gathered, are as follows:

Mr. Orange and his wife had quarrelled a day or two before the tragedy, and on Monday about 3 o'clock P. M. Mr. Orange came home, when the trouble culminated in the death of the wife.

The weapon with which the shooting was done was replaced in a rack over the door, where it ordinarily rested.

When the neighbors came to Orange's humble home they found the dead body of the poor woman resting in the doorway, her head and a portion of the body lying on the floor, and the feet and limbs over the door, and the feet and finis over the door-sill. The clothing of the dead wife was blackened by powder and charred from the blaze of the gun, from which fact it is reasonable to infer that the parties

Seriors Accident.—Yesterday evening between 2 and 3 o'clock a mule attached to a wagon occupied by Mr. Ford, of Hanover county, became unruly. Mr. Ford in his efforts to check the mule was thrown out, and the wagon overturned. His head struck on the rocks in the street, and having the reins in his hands, Mr. Ford pulled the mule over on him, the animal failing flat on Mr. Ford's head. He was removed to Mr. Harrison's drugstore, near by, and found on examination that he received a severe scalp-wound, and it is feared he has sustained some internal injury. He was taken to his brother's home, near the cor-ner of Belvidere and Cumberland streets.

Trades Parado.

To the Editor of the Dispatch: While our merchants are discussing another trades parade, would it not be a good suggestion to have it as an adjunct to the Fair, and instead of the line of march extending, as it last did, down Broad street in the death of the wife.

As no one was present at the time of the shooting nothing positively is known as to the particulars or the trouble which immediately preceded the shooting.

This much is known—that immediately advertised that the grand features of the after the dreadful deed Mr. Orange left this have and made his way to the planta. Charles City county. He made known to the Fair, which certainly is a thing most Mr. Parsons the fact that he had killed his carnestly wished for by all our merchants, wife with a shot-gun, and the officer took him in charge and safely conveyed him to the county jail.

It is said that a brother of the dead wife, hearing of the sad fate of his sister, armed himself with a shot-gun and went out with himself with a shot-gun and went out with the county jail. ANOTHER AID ON AINSLEY'S STAFF.
